for Jesus

But let us who live in the light think clearly...
God has decided to save us through our Lord
Jesus Christ... 1Thess. 5:8-9

Dear TEAM,

How could we ever thank you enough for praying us through 2015? This has been a fruitful year in so many ways. For 10 years Monika has longed for just one teacher to come along side and team-teach with her. Year after year she has poured her heart into helping the poor foreign children who struggle for a quality education in Austria. This year, not just one, but three other teachers have begun working together to change the attitude and atmosphere of the school. Children learn best from teachers who love their students. Equally important, the school district has modernized its policies regarding teacher-child interaction. Out is the hard-line approach, and in are the more kind and encouraging methods of relating to students. These are answers to some very long-term prayer requests.

PANTONS in AUSTRIA
2015

God continues bringing young adults into our lives who are wanting to know God in personal and realistic ways. Monika and I are thankful for the open-minded, innocent young people who are eagerly wanting to live lives pleasing to God. With very few healthy role models in Austria, people lack tools for building healthy relationships. We thank God for our education and training, something that has been welcomed and appreciated here.

Danny... that boy is amazing! God has given him favor with so many people in Salzburg, where he currently lives and works. His strategy for ministry is simple: find a lonely person starving for love and offer to be their friend. The streets of Europe are full of such people. I love the simplicity of his approach in fulfilling the great commission. God save us from complicating it.

He recently traveled to Egypt alone, where he was met by a seminary professor named Pastor Moody. We met Pastor Moody in 2005 on our first trip, and Danny has stayed connected ever since. Pastor Moody took him to churches, fellowship groups, and schools, where Danny encouraged people with the Scriptures and his testimony. He is praying for their courage in these difficult times of uncertainty and persecution. Of course Danny came home excited, pumped, and full of joy. His burden to equip believers and make disciples in Egypt weighs on his heart.

Danny, Monika and I are thankful for your continued friendship, prayer, and support.
